> Ms A. J. Leach has complied a very valuable book entitled the Magistrates Ordinance 1890. The ordinance is a bulky one containing 127 sections, with schedules attached to it which take up more space than the ordinance itself. The great value therefore of notes, references and a copions index will be at once apparent. These Mr Leach has fully supplied. To the text of the Ordinance there have also been added tables giving the pases cited and the other ordinances in force which expressly confer powers on magistrates, showing the offences over which jurisdiction is given and the maximum amount of punishment which may be awarded. The book will be of great value to all connected with Cour work in Hongkong.

GIRL of fifteen, who left the paternal roof in Hunghom last month and came over to Hongkong to see the races, did not return again, and her anxious parents reported to the police that she had been kidnapped. Inquiries were made and the police traced her to a house in Tang Kwai Lane, Taipingshan. A lukong was sent to search her. Delective Sergeant Hadden had a look at the place immediately afterwards and found the girl crouched up in a small the roum. A man and his wife who cooupied the room, and who declared that they knew nothing about the girl, were arrested, They were brought before Mr Wodehouse at the Police Court to-day. The girl stated that she had been entired into the house by the woman, who promised to give her find clothes and jewellery and plenty to eat. The case was remanded,

A MEMBER of the light-fingered fraternity has been at work for some time in the Police Court, rifling the pookets of the respectable citizens who attend the Magisterial leves to see justice administered and to. enjoy the feeling of not being in the dock. As a rule, the pockets of the Police Court audience do not contain much, but it is, to say the least, annoying to have them picked in the presence of the Magistrate. Totries beyond, vid Brindin; to the or greasy, or that appear to have been used day a woman who was watching the trial of one of her friends felt a hand stealthilp insinuate itself into her pocket: She clutched the hand and lifted up her voice in a shout that paralysed the Court and made the hair of the dook officer stand on and like the quills upon the fratful porcupine. It was found that the hand belonged to a meek and innocent-looking old men with a benevolent smile, and that it contained the aum of three cents. The case was at once submitted to the Magistrate, but was remanded.

The Government have adopted a very wise course in reference to Mr. Wodehouse's departure on leave by next French mail. Instead of pitchforking a cadet into work for which he has had no training, Mr Wise has been asked and has agreed to perform the duties of both magistrates. As to the dull monotony of our black 801.00 evening-wear, that also saves our pockets in another sense. It may be true that wo stalk like 'melanchely and spectral visious to the dinuer-table, but most of as would be still more melanoholy if we had to provide to epidemic of fever and the leaving of ourselves with several new suits of coloured tinery in the course of the year. And in what colours should we array ourselves Should a man dress in red or groon accor-$2,184.00 ding to his political convictions, or show 1,815.00 himself in blue or tose colour according to the state of his feelings ? Motley's the only wear, said melancholy Jaques, and so it would be for men who cared to exchange is the architect of his own fortune. Mike love bright colours. One of the most lov nothin bud a shovel or a hod to dhraw his able, and also one of the most foolish of plans wid. mon, Oliver Goldsmith, frankly confessed that he did not wish to go into the Church because he was fond of coloured clothes, He presented himself to be examined for ordination in a pair of scarlet breeches; and when better days dawned upon him, he imusedately blossomed into the glories of bine silk and plain-coloured valvet. But w. should remember also that Goldsmith's tailor, the patient Mr Filby, was never fully paid; and that the greater part of his financial troubles, that so embittered his lie. was due to his indulgence of that Beraid. harmles vanity. Its inexposive simplicity are not the least merits of our present $2,5% 00 | coscume. How many bodies are oldthed by one suit of sturdy cloth? Long after we have discarded that outer huse, it is car-308.15 ried by others through the world, passing from block to back until it adorns the furmers stick and protects his own from the thisving prows. The Babhedr m of stainloss ghusts, as Teufels rockh calls an oldclothes shop, would be ill-stocked with sitk coats and satin breeches; assurbily they would be of little use to our poerer brethren. But the mention of Herr Toufelsdrookh reminds one of the account of the genesis of clothes given by one who went more deeply into their philosophy than any other thinker. Cluthes too, which began in colishest love of ornament, what have they not become ! To ornament there succeed. 150 00 | ed bodily comfort, warmth, and sense of 298 58 security; and then, and not till then, did the idea of shame enter into and abide with us, bringing all manner of civilization in its train. Clothes gave us individuali y, distinctions, social polity; Clothes have made men of us; ont, continues the philosopher, they are threatening to make Cloh a screens of us. No, we have no wish to be converted into Clothes-acreens let out clothes meet the requirements of shame, of 932 (4) comfort, and of warmth; let them convey 240.69 the idea of distinction where it is necessary, and the soldier flame in scarlet, the Judge 569.00 wear his ermine, and the Bishop rejoice in think of them morely as decorations. In a certain sense, we des ashanded to dress, and we are not in the least ashamed to confess it. We have and vanced beyond the muitive meaning of clothes and would think chame to ouragives for wishing to 92,280.00 return to it. ven if we were minded to 1,440.00 make the attempt, we are far more likely to make ourselves objects of decision than 1,080.00 of admiration, to add to the galety of the world in a way the least flattering to our 846 91 self-respect, and to turn the jest of our 219.05 days merrier at our own expense, After all what is there to complain of in our present dress? The much shued tell had would be every whit as ploturesque as a Bateman returned to the Echool to of amodiations connected with it; and as it is is a much more serviceable defence for the head. It is only when they try to $1 666.00 be ornamental, and break out into conchman's butions and strange flaps, that our coats are hideous; as long as they are cut T loosely for one comfort, they are quite good-looking enough. It is true that neither the frock-coat nor the dress-coal 84,800.00 looks very well upon a gentleman who is 559 70 shaped halloon-wise; but it would be the fortune of the too retund to look grotesque
